

History and Heritage Group – Helen Deaton

Mortlake has a rich historic past. It is important that the development of the brewery site is sympathetic to Mortlake's heritage, preserving key features and reflecting its historic character.

To ensure the developer and the wider community are aware of this heritage, I have produced a leaflet that gives a précis of the important aspects of Mortlake's past. I am happy to make this available to those who want copies.

The History and Heritage Group will be a resource that all members of the MBCG can draw upon. I have access to both a large archive of pictures and photographs, and a wealth of local knowledge through my contacts with the Barnes and Mortlake History Society which I would be happy to share.

This Group will also liaise with the archaeologists appointed to excavate the site and offer them access to our local historical resources.

I would be delighted to work with anyone who wants to join me in emphasising, to the local community, the architect and the developer, the importance of Mortlake's rich history.
